

Abstract

A method of distributing and executing upgrade/installation instructions as data objects. These instructions can then be completed automatically requesting user interaction only when required. This method would allow someone with little knowledge of the application and/or 5 internal implementation of said application to perform an upgrade to the application.